Collection Description

Biographical Note

Calvin Fred Craig, native of Atlanta, Ga., was born May 5, 1928. A heavy-equipment operator, Craig served as Grand Dragon of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan during the 1960s. In October of 1965, he and other officers of the Knights were called before the House Committee on Un-American Activities. His only serious brush with the law came in 1966, when he refused to provide Klan records to a House committee and was later fined for contempt of Congress.

In April 1968, Craig called a news conference to announce that he had resigned his Klan post to work for a nation where "black men and white men can stand shoulder to shoulder in a united America." It is reported that he was influenced by Xernona Clayton, a black civil rights activist who was in charge of the Atlanta Model Cities program, a federally financed interracial neighborhood improvement group which Clayton and Craig served on together. In 1970 however, having soured on the Model Cities program, he helped form a secretive white group called the Christian Americans Patriotic Society, and in 1975, with Klan membership declining, he helped publicize a revival of the Klan in Georgia. By 1984, however, he had dropped out of both groups. He died in Newnan, Georgia on April 13, 1998.
