PARADE AND DEMONSTRATION

By tradition, the celebrations of the Great October Revolution begin by a parade of forces of the Moscow Garrison. Columns of courageous, staunch and able defendants of their ~~working~~ Socialist country are on the march. Soviet military forces are equipped with the most modern military technique and weapons. They vigilantly stand in defence of peace and security of our country and are ready to repulse any aggressor and to fulfill their patriotic and international duty. The youth of Moscow enters the Square. The sportsmen march past under the banners of sport societies. Representatives of the great labour army — those who melt metal and create complicated machines, who create articles of art and educate youth, who probe into the secrets of Universe and build new cities — pass the Red Square in an endless stream. The march at the Red Square was a vivid demonstration of love and faithfulness of the working people towards the Communist Party, the behests of Lenin and the ideals of October. The celebrations of the 54th October anniversary in Moscow were gay and colourful.
