

RAILWAY BUILDERS

The builders of the railway line Tyumen-Surgut moved towards each other through the taiga, over swamps and marshes, in cold and frost. Foreman Arkhip Mokhov directed the last stage of work before the connection of the line. This took place on the 575th kilometer from Tyumen. A group of Soviet writers arrived for a visit to the builders. Boris Polevoy received a traditional souvenir - a silver spike. The completion of a major section of the railway line was a festive event. The builders have taken a Socialist obligation to complete the line Tyumen-Surgut a half a year ahead of schedule.
