A pre-election meeting of the electors of the Baumansky Electoral District of Moscow with candidate L.I. Brezhnev, General Secretary of the CC of the CPSU, was held at the Kremlin Palace of Congresses in an atmosphere of great enthusiasm. Leaders of the Communist Party and the Soviet government attended the meeting together with representatives of the working people. The pre-election meeting was opened by Makeyev, First Secretary of the Baumansky District Committee of the CPSU. Brezhnev, whom the Muscovites, together with all Soviet people, named their first candidate deputy. The floor is given to L.I. Brezhnev. In the beginning of his speech L.I. Brezhnev said: "For almost a quarter of a century now, I have been entrusted to represent the interests of the working people in the supreme organ of the country's state power. It is the seventh time I am addressing a pre-election meeting like this one. Frankly speaking, it is impossible to overcome the emotion I experienced on the eve of addressing you. This emotion is due to the sense of responsibility, to profound, sincere gratitude for your confidence and for the honour you have done me." In the speech which was penetrated with care about the welfare of the people, were stated the major results of the four years that had passed since the last elections, and was outlined a wide perspective of the social and economic development of our country. "I think that we can draw the following conclusion: the platform which the Party proclaimed at the last elections is being realized successfully. This is another proof of the fact that the words of the Leninist Party are never at variance with its deeds. The Soviet people know this well. They believe the Party and support its policy by their everyday work. This is the basis of all our successes, the basis of our optimism, of our unshakable belief in the triumph of communism." A large part of the speech was devoted to the constructive realization of the program of peace which had been set by the XXIVth Congress of the CPSU and was supported by all Socialist states. "The favourable changes in the world situation are primarily due to the influence exerted on the course of developments by the world of Socialism, its successes, its might and its example. This is the result of the purposeful and coordinated policy of the Socialist countries. The Central Committee of our Party has always paid and will continue to pay unabating attention to the development of cooperation with the fraternal countries in all spheres, including international relations." In conclusion L.I. Brezhnev said: "I regard the support of my candidature as support of the Party's policy and approval of its course. To do all for new victories of the communist cause - this is the main goal, the supreme duty and set purpose of my whole life as a Communist." The meeting of muscovites-electors with their candidate to the Supreme Soviet of the USSR L.I. Brezhnev, General Secretary of the CC of the CPSU, was a mighty demonstration of the unanimous support of the pre-election program of the Party.
